Description and Requirements

The purpose of this course is to provide an overview of the constitutional protection of rights and liberties in Canada in the post-Charter era. In addition to examining the legal development of the rights and liberties protected under the Charter, the course will consider the broader impact of Charter adjudication on public policy and the nature of Canadian democracy. In particular, the course will examine the tension between constitutional supremacy and judicial supremacy.

The course requirements consist of a mid-term examinations (30%), a term paper (30%), class participation (10%), and a comprehensive final examination (30%). The mid-term examination will be held on February 12, 2018, and the term paper is due on April 9, 2018. A supplemental final examination will be available, but the privilege of additional work will not be granted. According to Senate regulations, instructors are not permitted to make special arrangements for final exams. Please consult the Calendar, section 4.7.2.1, General University Information and Regulations at www.mcgill.ca.
